

Announcing a new book series from SUNY Press

Studies in Technical Communication

Miles A Kimball and Charles Sides, Editors

Broad and interdisciplinary, this new series invites proposals for book-length edited collections and traditional book-length monographs studying technical communication and related fields from all angles. It encompasses not only technical communication in corporations, but also in government, health, military, and extra-institutional contexts. The series values scholarship in the theory and application of technical communication, including both quantitative and qualitative empirical research. The editors particularly wish to provide a venue for book-length, in-depth scholarship on the history of technical communication and the role of technical communication in culture and technology.

If you'd like to discuss a project or submit a proposal, please email us!

Miles A Kimball | miles.kimball@gmail.com

Charles Sides | csides@fitchburgstate.edu

James Peltz | james.peltz@sunypress.edu

